History

Joe Adams was a popular teacher at Clarke Road Secondary School from 1968 until his death in June 1985 due to an accidental fall at home. He was the Business Education Department Head and taught a variety of business courses including accounting, economics, and law.

Joe was also active in many other areas of the school. He helped coach football and wrestling for several years and was the teaching staff's representative on the CRSS students' council. He also was involved in the Grade 9 orientation program.

Known among his students for his wisdom, warmth, and integrity, Joe was deeply committed to ensuring these young adults were valued and respected. He had high standards – both for himself and his students – because he believed in their ability to rise to challenges. This scholarship was funded in Joe's memory by his students and teaching colleagues.
